The difference between WordPress posts and pages is that a website uses pages to display content that is static and not associated with a date or time. Pages are permanent fixtures for people to access at any time. On the contrary, Posts are individual pieces of time-based content on a site. For instance, pages might be used for Home, About, and Contact; whereas posts might be used for articles or updates that is shared to offer new content to readers.